

Adelaide Lutestanski

December 18, 1924 - May 16, 2020

Adelaide Lutestanski of Eltingville passed away on May 16, 2020. Adelaide was born in Queens, New York. For as long as she can remember she wanted to perform. Since her father decided that was not appropriate for a young girl, she became a secretary after high school. Working as a school secretary for 31 years, she was well liked and respected as someone who went out of their way to help people. She met John, the love of her life, and settled in Queens. Her love of music and theatre was passed on to her son and daughter and later, her grandson Logan. Throughout her life she took every opportunity to perform with local groups singing and dancing, especially in comedy. She loved to make people laugh.

In 1996 she moved to Staten Island and volunteered at Staten Island University South in the Physical Therapy department for 12 years.

She said she must have been born with a dog in her arms and was rarely without one. She was a member of Staten Island Council of Animal Welfare. Adelaide was also a member of Woodrow United Methodist Church and the Mt. Loretto Senior Center.

She encouraged and inspired people's dreams and always looked for the good in people. She was a daughter, wife, mother, grandmother and very recently, greatgrandmother to Lily. She will be missed by anyone who knew her.

She will be buried in Calverton National Cemetery with her late husband John
