“ Visiting you and Tony was always a gastronomic and welcoming experience. You'd go downstairs and come up loaded with goodies- your homemade sausage, homemade wine and other surprises. We'd stop in to say "hi" and before we knew it we'd be eating and laughing. "Sit down, mangia!" you'd exclaim. Your and Tony's stories made our visits fun. You shared your recipe for homemade pasta and Thomas couldn't wait to make it. It came out great, thanks to you.

Until we share a glass of wine and pasta when we come to join you, we want to thank you for your friendly spirit and generosity.

Rest in peace, Angie!

With love,

Cousins Rosemarie Chirido, Thomas & Janet and babies, Christine & Ron Paronich and boys, and Carolyn & Greg Warnke

“Angelina was such a good cook, but she liked to use a lot of spice. We have a wonderful memory of our visit to your house on Staten Island when we all sat in the kitchen eating Angelina's delicious (and very spicy!) food and drinking red wine. Some of the dishes were so spicy it made us sweat, and when we'd say how hot the food was, Angelina would smile and in her very own way she would say. "Eat. It's hot but it won't kill you!" It was an afternoon of so much fun.
