“ Hey Bri. It's been eight years since you've passed and I hope you know how much your life has changed mine. Because of you, I've become so much more invested in the health and well being of all my players and soccer became so much more than just a game to me. I'm sorry I wasn't who I needed to be during our time together and I'm sorry that I didn't get to where I am sooner, but I hope you're looking down on me knowing that I'll be here for every single player that needs me for the rest of my days because of you. I've spoken about you to all of my teams and have reminded them that they are never alone in this world. I still write your initials on my wrist before our games to remind myself that I need to value the influence I have over the lives that cross mine and not just their results. Thank you for giving me that. You'll never be forgotten.

“ To Rodd and Kathy and family,
I am so deeply sorry to have learned of the loss of your daughter.
She was lovely inside and out.
She was athletic and so smart , not to mention so pretty too.
I used to see her exercise by jogging.
There are no words that I can say to you over her loss.
I do know there is a Divine God up in the heavens.
Let the Lord bring you much comfort at this time.
Always remember someday when Jesus returns, you will see her again.
All suffering and death will be no more.
Again, I am so deeply sorry for your loss.
Jesus will embrace her and bring comfort to your family.

“Brianna, or “Baby Bri” as I called her during the brief time we went to SI Tech together, was a true light. We shared a lot of time together at school: playing soccer, running track, setting the then-school record in the 4x400, competing in the pentathlon together, and of course sometimes doing all of that at once. We were so similar in our interests and activities that people started to say she was a mini me (sharing the same name made that comparison even more apparent) which is where the nickname “Baby Bri” was born. Her passion for competition and success was strong but nothing was as strong as her passion for people. Bri always made sure that she was doing her best and that she was bringing everyone around her up to do their best as well. As much as the nickname “baby” implies that she would be looking up to me, it was actually the opposite; I looked up to her a lot. She was always striving to be better in school, sports, and in making sure that everyone around her was taken care of. Brianna was a bright light that brought joy into the lives of everyone she met and she will not be forgotten.
