“ Since we were childhood friends we lived in the same neighborhood. When Doris had her seven children, I had not seen her as of late. I bumped into her on fifth Ave in our neighborhood and she was strolling with all her little ones and I only had my first child. I said in all innocence and being close friends, Doris, what are you doing, trying to populate the earth. Well she laughed. little did I know as the years passed, guess what, I wound up with seven of my own. So funny how things turn out. When we reconnected years later, she had the last laugh on me. What a fun loving and wonderful person she was. I will never forget her and she will always be in my prayers and my heart. ❤️❤️
