“ Everybody attending this wake and funeral service likely has an anecdotal example of my Grandmother's eccentricity. Nevertheless, I never went to bed without fully knowing she loved me and the rest of her family with an unmatched passion. She was a little too loud and maybe she cursed too often, but she held her children close and adored her husband (regardless of what she might have told you!) She possessed a personality too big for her stature and possibly any room she was in, but she always told the truth (at least her version of it). I think that's what I'll miss most of all.
