“ I was very young during the time I spent at my friends Dawn and Kim's house. Sorry to say I don't remember much about George because he spent a lot of time working. He was the pillar who quietly supported the home while Marge (R.I.P.) managed it warmly and lovingly. I remember how happy he was when Chris was born though, and how happy his family was, which is a father's legacy. His children are healthy strong loving people who contribute much more than their share to society. He had to be stronger than any one should have to be and survived through the worst of tragedies and bore his pain with grace and dignity, and earned his place among the angels. There is one less good man in our world today, something our world has too few of as it is. I'm praying that Kim and Christian, John and everyone George knew can find peace and comfort in knowing he is in a better place now, and someday we will all be reunited.
