“ When I think of John, I always remember his sense of humor and it makes me smile. The other memory was his ability to remember names. Since I forget names by the time I am done saying “hi”. I enjoyed watching John meet a group and then with no effort and a smile repeat everyone’s name. You will be missed by your “Little Bro”!

“ My sincerest condolences to John's loved ones. I am one of those people who only knew John via social media - Facebook. We had a circle of mutual friends. I don't remember how we first knew each other but it was ages ago - even before he was married -- and it was so nice to see over the years how happy he was as a husband and father. John and I connected over our love of classic literature. I wish I could have met him in person but even if it was only virtually I treasure having him in my life. Theodore Dreiser wrote: “Love is the only thing you can really give in all this world. When you give love, you give everything.” I know that John lived by those words. He was such a lovely man. May his memory be a blessing. -- Susan Dunn, San Diego, California
