“ My dear cousin Mario
I can't believe I am writing this. All our hearts are broken. You were always smiling and laughing. Always had kind words for everyone. I know my Dad loved you dearly too. He Thought the world of you. He said you were a "gentlemen and scholar". And he was so right ! Helping others even while battling your own illness. We were all blessed to know you.

“ *Angela and family,
So sorry to hear about Mario's passing.
While I only knew Mario for a short time, he was very pleasant, friendly and always looking to help me out as I did work in front of my home, as I live across the street from you.
A real gentleman.
My sincerest condolences and prayers.
May he Rest in Peace.*

That had valiant armies, captains, and prophets,
And wealthy ports and ships all over the seas..." --Czeslaw Milosz Likewise, a loved one is a source of strength, wisdom, and presence. When they pass, it feels as though we have lost a part of ourselves, a beacon that guided us and filled our lives with meaning. In this time of grief, please accept our heartfelt condolences. May the memories of your departed provide you with comfort and strength for all of time.*
