“ I had the honor of working with Paul at Schering and Merck; we both joined the company about the same time. I was always impressed with his passion for his work and thorough rigor for his science. He contributed to many projects and products that have benefitted human health. Paul was a gentleman who was kind, considerate and one of the funniest people I have met. I enjoyed all of our lunch discussions about science and life. Paul always spoke of his family with a smile and a gleam in his eye. He was a fantastic scientist and even better best friend. As much as I will miss Paul, I am just as happy that I could call him a friend. Deepest condolences to his wonderful family.

“ I was fortunate to work with Paul for several years at Merck. Paul was certainly an excellent scientist yet what I remember most was his kindness. No matter the cause of a down day, you didn't stay somber long around Paul. He was always there with a smile, happy greeting and a story to make you laugh. I can say without a doubt that he is missed. My heartfelt condolences to his family and friends.

“ Paul was my office neighbor at work over the last few years. Paul was the epitome of class and graciousness. My bad mood from the morning commute would quickly end upon receiving his daily morning greetings. Plus, I knew it would be difficult to beat Paul’s commuter stories and he was always cheerful. Paul worked hard, was smart, positive, grateful, and gracious and compassionate. I wished to have his qualities but found it difficult to replicate. Paul was always there to listen to stories, complaints, and even trivial matters like baseball standings, and was clever enough to sneak in his own accounts, usually how proud he was of his family. He would just beam with pride. I remember him expressing concern and sorrow following the passing of his in-law, which spoke to Paul’s incredibly selflessness and concern for others. I am grateful to have crossed paths with him. May God bless you and your family and friends, Paul. You will be greatly missed.

“ Paul was a graceful, kind-hearted, and thoughtful friend, and I am deeply saddened to hear of his passing. I too was lucky enough to meet and work with Paul at Merck, and he was the consummate scientist and collaborator, with deep intellect and provoking questions. Always collegial and respectful – but equally clever, eager to share his dry wit and wry humor. All those around usually ended up with a hearty laugh, trying to emulate his infectious smile. Truly a wonderful person. Paul, you’ll be missed and you taught me much.

“ Paul was simply put a great guy. He was the first person to walk into my office and welcome me when I joined the discovery team at the Kenilworth site where we both worked on HCV drug discovery at Merck & Co. He had a passion for science and was a great experimentalist. I fondly recall a business trip we made together visiting a laboratory at UNC, Chapel Hill. We got to know each other better and continued to share stories about our families after the trip. He would always beam with joy and flash that smile when he spoke about his kids - a really loving and proud papa! One of the truly nice people I've ever met! So long, Paul!

Paul was a such nice gentleman; I know him since 2016 after I joined in ID/VAX dept. in Merck. we worked on two programs; he shared his scientific insights and suggestions with me. I was deeply impressed by his caring, smiling, humor, generosity, and loving to share driving our happy van. Through chatting on our Happy Van, I also know he is a model to the ones who is a son, father, brother, and uncle. Rest In Peace, Paul!

I have had the pleasure of knowing and working with Paul since the mid 1990's when he joined Schering-Plough in Kenilworth. He was always a great guy, a true friend to all - and an excellent scientist to boot. He is highly published and well respected for his work in infectious disease drug discovery. He treated everyone with warmth and kindness, never had a bad word to say about anyone. I offer my deepest sympathy to Paul's family, but take heart in a life very well lived and loved.
