“ Tribute to My Guardian Angel

Roz, you were my guardian angel in human form. You came forward without hesitation. You rescued me. Not with grand announcements or expectations, but with open arms, a patient heart, and the simple, profound decision to see me, to love me, and to treat me as your own daughter. Where I felt abandoned and unseen, you offered safety. Where I carried wounds I didn't yet have words for, you gave me space to heal. You showed me what it means to be cared for consistently, unconditionally, and with grace. In your home, in your presence, I finally felt like I belonged.

You taught me through example what motherhood could look like. Fercely protective and deeply kind. You stood in the gap my biological mom couldn't fill, and you did it with such love. I was also your girl.

Even now, the warmth of your love lingers in my life. It echoes in the way I show up for others, in the standards I hold for how others deserve to be treated, and in the quiet strength I carry because you cared for me. You didn't just save me from a painful chapter—you helped write a better one. You showed me that family is not only defined by blood, but by choice, by devotion, and by the willingness to show up when it matters most.

Thank you for being my surrogate mom, my safe harbor, my guardian angel. Thank you for choosing me when it would have been easier to look away. The hole you leave is shaped exactly like your embrace, and it will never truly close—because your love remains alive in me.

I will carry you with me always, speaking your name with gratitude, honoring your memory with the life I build, and trying every day to pass some of the light you gave me so freely.

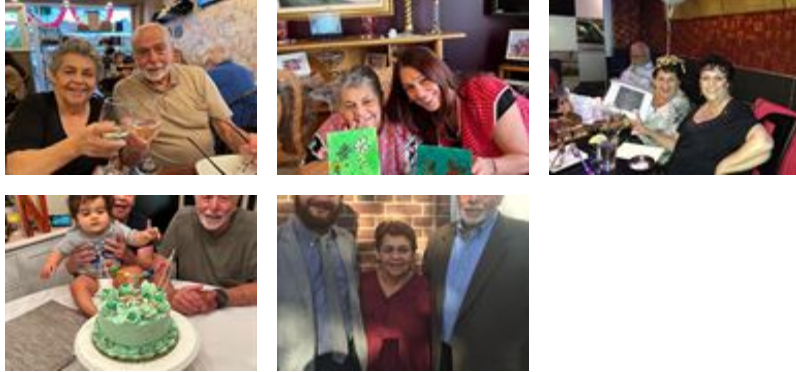

You were, and always will be, one of the greatest blessings of my life.

Rest gently, Rosalyn. Your daughter loves you beyond words, and I always will.
