“ I am Toms brother in law. I first met him when I was 7 yrs of age and am now 69. Tom got me my first job on Wall street as a runner and at the same time I was living at their home in Waccabuc for a few weeks. One day during the two hour commute home, Tom was feeding the various toll booths that are still dotted along the various roads. Upon encountering the fourth booth he was short of change, and he asked me if I had any money. I emptied out my pockets of pennies and a few nickels just as we arrived at the hopper. Realizing he was far short of the required amount he hurled caution to the wind (literally) by tossing the whole 'Kit and Kaboodle' into the hopper and then gunning the car as fast as he could. Instantaneously a cacaphony of lights and sirens, bells and whistles alerted the cops to our crimes. You would have thought we were robbing the Bank of New York with sawed off shot guns! Unfazed, Tom puffed his cigarette with one hand and drove with the other leaning as he did hard against the drivers door as we both laugh hilariously while checking the rear view mirror. That being said, Tom was like a big brother to me who enjoyed life and was one of the most generous people I have ever met. I will sorely miss him. The next time you are in NY I highly recommend blowing through one of those accursed toll booths in honor of Tom Cahillane and listen to the bells and whistles going off. Just remove your license plates prior to the event. It relieves stress and is good for the soul.
