“ I was very saddened to learn of Bill’s passing who I knew as a colleague, a friend and champion of the less fortunate who lived on Staten Island. In addition to his role as an executive director of a nonprofit that provided employment and training services to Staten Islanders, Bill served in a voluntary capacity on the Executive Board of the New York City Employment and Training Coalition for many years, representing the interests of Staten Island residents and ensuring that they received high quality services. Bill’s knowledge of the Staten Island neighborhoods and their residents never ceased to amaze me. He seemed to know everyone and was warmly received wherever he went. As a nonprofit executive, he put the needs of his clients ahead of his own needs and would move heaven and earth to ensure that they successfully entered the world of work and became taxpaying citizens. Bill was a good man and he will be missed by all who knew him and his work on Staten Island.
